The Register of yesterday thinks that the way for Hayes to "reconcile Souther seners to the old flag" is to appoint them to office. To this policy wedo not object; we are glad to see the President appointing a liberal amount of them to office; not only to office in the South but to National positions. But how is it with the Democratic powers that be when the Democratic powers that be when they appoint acybody to office? For in-

We observe that the Episcopal Church Congress in New York was very much exercised on the subject of amusements in its debates on the subject the other day-It discussed dancing and theatre going at some length, and after an extensive luterchange of opinion came, apparently, to lass barmful amusement of the two. We agree with this conclusion. We precommunication because it shows in a striking manner how willingly men will pay tax if only you disguise it in some of the system of cheap balls now prevailing in all cities is nothing short of a curse to society. Hundrels and thousands of girls are thereby prepared for ultimate ruin. And as Mrs. General Sherman well said in her recent letter on the subject of dancing, it is an amusement succeptible of so much degeneracy that those who become devotes to it have great need indeed to beware of the lengths to which it is carried.

On the other hand, theatre going is an amusement, which while it can be and is amusement, which while it can be and is abused, finds its origin in the intellectu abused, finds its origin in the intellectus al cravings of human nature. The dramatic element is an ingredient of man's mental developement. We observed recently some remarks by a Boston divine on the subject that struck us as sensible. Speaking of theatre going, he said that the subject was a perplexing one to the Christian, and one whichlthrew him back upon his moral foundation and divine standards. But the dramatic instinct, he claimed, was implanted universally in human nature, and the world of ideal art was as pure and as much for man's domination as the world of nature. The many different many as the world of nature. The distributions of the course, was won by Coronet, Deadhead at twas as pure and as much for man's domination as the world of nature. The domination as the world of nature. The fact that the dramatic art had been abused, he said, was no more against the drama than the fact that some beautiful or a bacchanalian orgie was an argument against the groves and islands of nature. The abuses of the stage were the abuses of the corrupt heart of men. The stage, he thought, could be reformed, and it was the duty of the church to go down into the world of amusement and make it nucer and batter.

We think most persons who have given the subject much thought will agree with the opinion expressed by this divine, that the dramatic instluct is too strongly im-President sent the following nominations planted in human nature ever to be eradicated. It is, therefore, simply a question of controlling the stage by good or bad influences. The influences new at work upon it are noticeably better than they were a few years ago. There is a more general attendance of good people at thestree, when standard plays are presented, than at any previous period, and hence the tone of nearly all sizes performers is manifestly higher. They are literally dissolving the debt like so much sugar in the bottom of their tumblers, and like Cleopatra when she dissolved the pearls and swallowed them, they are drinking such costly potations as serve to show their high born contempt for expense.

It is strange how people look at this matter of expense in the item of taxation A toddy loving Virginian (and, judging from the returns, their name is legion) thinks nothing of paying his quota of the goes with a certain sort of devotion to the nearest saloon early in the morning to discharge this sacred duty, and wearies not with the going down of the sun. And yet strange as it may seem, this same sensitive son of the sacred soil, who thinks nothing of paying his dollar per day is the way of drinks towards saving the honor of Virginia, is ready to repudiate rather than see a few cents added to the taxon each $100 valuation of his property.
